INTRODUCTION

According to the Act on Trading in Financial Instruments (1070/2017), the Exchange shall draw up and keep available to the public rules regarding operations of a regulated market. The Ministry of Finance shall confirm said Rules of the Exchange and any amendments to them.

These rules are applicable to Nasdaq Helsinki Ltd’s operations of the regulated market. The Rules comprise chapters on bonds, funds listed on the exchange and securities listed on other trading venues. Rules on shares are placed on separate rulebook (“Nordic Main Market Rulebook for Issuers of Shares”).

In addition to the rules of the exchange referred to in the legislation, this rulebook contains explanatory texts that will give guidance on the application of certain rules. These explanatory texts are written with italics and indented so that they can better be distinguished from the actual rule text.

The explanatory texts are not part of the Rules of the Exchange confirmed by the Ministry of Finance. The purpose of issuing explanatory texts is to describe the purpose of the rules and give guidelines and examples on how the Exchange interprets the rules. Therefore, the text does not always describe a definite interpretation of the rule, as situations that are different from those described in the explanatory texts may occur in practice.

The latest version of these Rules is available on Nasdaq’s website at https://www.nasdaq.com/solutions/rules-regulations-helsinki
1. General rules

1.1.2. The Exchange has issued separate rules for securities trading\(^1\) and issuers of shares\(^2\), which together with these Rules constitute the Rules of the Exchange within the meaning of Chapter 3, Section 6 of the Act on Trading in Financial Instruments.

1.1.3. The Managing Director of the Exchange may issue supplementary rules and regulations and any other necessary guidelines relating to exchange operations. Such guidelines shall be binding in the same manner as these Rules.

1.1.4. These Rules and all guidelines issued by the Managing Director are governed by Finnish law.

1.1.5. The Exchange can make changes to the Rulebook. Such changes shall apply to the Issuer and its Shares at the earliest 30 days after the Exchange has informed the Issuer and published the information via the Exchange’s website.

1.1.6. The Exchange may under specific circumstances decide that minor or technical changes to the Rulebook shall apply earlier than 30 days after publication as the situation demands.

1.1.7. This Rulebook applies as from the day when the Issuer requests admission to trading of its financial instrument at the Exchange and during such time as the financial instrument are admitted to trading at the Exchange.

1.6.2. The Issuer shall notify of application of the Guidelines for Insiders and also describe its essential insider administration procedures annually in the corporate governance statement, if Issuer is obligated to prepare the statement.

The efficient administration of insider matters, like preparing of insider list and disclosure of managers’ transactions under MAR (EU 2014/596), in an Issuer requires that the insider administration is organized in a consistent and reliable manner. The Guidelines for Insiders is a compilation of obligatory legislation and serves as minimum level regulation for insider administration in Issuers and in other companies under the scope of the Guidelines for Insiders. The obligations on the insider lists, the notifications and disclosures of managers’ and related party transactions as well as the closed period trading restriction and the insider administration and surveillance as defined in the Guidelines for Insiders are binding, and the Issuer shall describe its essential insider administration procedures yearly in the corporate governance statement as stated in the Finnish Corporate Governance Code of the Finnish Securities Market Association.
2. Disclosure and information requirements

2.1. Disclosure of inside information

2.1.1. The Issuer shall disclose inside information in accordance with Article 17 of MAR.

2.1.2. The obligation of a listed company to publicly disclose inside information is regulated by the Market Abuse Regulation ("MAR"), including its implementing measures and relevant guidelines of European Securities and Markets Authority ("ESMA"). Inside information is defined in Article 7 in MAR.

2.1.3. A listed company may, on its own responsibility, delay disclosure to the public of inside information provided that all of the conditions set out in MAR are met. The decision on the delay shall be notified to Financial Supervision Authority when the inside information is disclosed.

This general provision applies to an issuer defined in MAR and whose financial instrument has been admitted to listing on the Exchange. This rule and its explanations set out below are guidance on certain circumstances and events that in the Exchange’s view may involve inside information. The intention of the guidance is to help the Issuer to be in compliance with MAR and to provide guidance on the Exchange’s view on the listed company’s disclosure requirements under MAR. It is not the intention that the general provision or guidance provided in this section should impose such obligations on the listed company which are in contradiction with MAR or impose additional obligations than those required by MAR.

Confidential handling of inside information

Unlawful disclosure of inside information is forbidden. According to MAR an unlawful disclosure arises where a person possesses inside information and discloses that information to any other person, except where the disclosure is made in the normal exercise of an employment, a profession or duties. MAR regulates in more detail legitimate behaviour relating to inside information and unlawful disclosure of inside information.

A listed company shall ensure that the inside information is treated confidentially and that no unauthorised party is given such information prior disclosure. Hence, inside information may not be disclosed to analysts, journalists, or any other parties, either individually or in groups, unless such information is simultaneously made public to the market. It is not possible to provide inside information e.g. at general meetings or analyst presentations without disclosure of the information. If the company intends to provide such information during such a meeting or presentation, the company must simultaneously disclose the information.

MAR regulates also so called market sounding. According to article 11 of MAR a market sounding comprises the communication of information, prior to announcement of a transaction, in order to gauge the interest of potential investor in a possible transaction and the conditions relating to it such as potential size or pricing, to one or more potential investor.

The listed company cannot evade its disclosure obligation by entering into an agreement with another party stating that specific information, or details in such information, should not be disclosed by the listed company.
Assessment of inside information

The determination of what constitutes inside information must be based on the facts and circumstances in each case.

In evaluating what may constitute inside information, the factors to be considered may among other things include:

- the expected extent or importance of the decision, fact or circumstance compared with the listed company’s activities as whole;
- the relevance of the information as regards the main determinants of the price of the listed company’s financial instruments; and
- all other market variables that may affect the price of the financial instruments.

When the listed company has received the information from an external party, also the reliability of the source can be taken into consideration.

An additional basis for evaluation is whether similar information in the past had a substantial effect or if the listed company itself has previously treated similar information as inside information. Of course this does not prevent listed companies from making changes to their disclosure policies, but inconsistent treatment of similar information should be avoided.

The listed company may contact the Exchange for advice. The Exchange’s employees are subject to a duty of confidentiality. However, the listed company is always ultimately responsible for fulfilling its duty of disclosure under MAR and these rules.

Examples of situations possibly including inside information

Set out below is a more detailed description of some of the examples and guidance on which type of information the Exchange would, based on the general provision, normally expect the disclosure to include. There is also guidance on the timing and methodology of disclosures which the Exchange would normally expect the listed company to follow.

The listed company should disclose inside information which, if it were made public, would be likely to have a significant effect on the prices of the financial instruments issued by the company. It is not required that actual changes in the price of the financial instruments occur. The effect on the price of the financial instruments may vary and should be determined on a company by company basis, taking into account, among other things, the prior trend of share price of the financial instruments, the relevant industry in question, and the actual market circumstances. Accordingly, an obligation to provide information pursuant to this provision may, for example, exist in the following situations:

- orders or investment decisions;
- co-operation agreements or other agreements of major importance;
- business acquisitions and divestitures;
• price or exchange rate changes;
• credit or customer losses;
• new joint ventures;
• research results, development of a new product or important invention;
• commencement or settlement of, or decisions rendered in, legal disputes;
• financial difficulties;
• decisions taken by authorities;
• shareholder agreements known to the company which may affect to the use of voting rights or negotiability of the shares or financial instruments;
• market rumours and information leaks;
• liquidity provision agreements;
• information regarding subsidiaries and affiliated companies;
• change in the financial result or financial position; and
• substantial changes to the operations of the listed company.

Orders or investment decisions; co-operation agreements

If a listed company discloses a major order, it could be essential to provide information about the value of the order, including the product or other content of the order and time period to which the order relates. Orders relating to new products, new areas of use, new customers or customer types, and new markets may be considered as inside information under certain circumstances. In the context of co-operation agreements, it may be difficult to determine the financial effects and, therefore, it is very important to provide the securities markets with a clear description of the reasons, purpose, and plans.

Business acquisitions and divestitures

If an Issuer discloses inside information about the acquisition or a sale of a company or business the disclosure should normally include:

• purchase price, unless special circumstances exist;
• method of payment;
• relevant information about the acquired or sold entity;
• the reasons for the transaction;
• estimated effects on the operation of the company;
• the time schedule for the transaction; and
• any key terms or conditions that apply to the transaction.

The company or business acquired shall be described in a manner that addresses its key line(s) of business, historical financial performance and financial position.

In conjunction with corporate transactions considered inside information special attention should be given to the completeness of information. Based on the information disclosed about a transaction, the market participants should be able to assess the financial effects of the acquisition or sale as well as the effects on the operation of the company and the effect on the price or value of the company’s financial instruments. Typically, such assessment requires knowledge of the financial effects of the acquisition or sale as well as the effects on the operation of the company.

The company should disclose the sale or purchase price of a company since it normally is a key element in assessing the effects of the transaction. In rare cases there may, however, be a possibility to withhold information regarding the price for an acquired or sold entity. This might be the case where the purchase price is not of importance for the valuation of the listed company admitted to listing. Another example could be when a disclosure is made before the price negotiations have been finalized. It is then impossible to inform about the price, but once the price has been agreed upon, relevant information thereon should be disclosed. It is not unusual that the purchase price is related to the future outcome of the acquired business. In such a case the company should disclose the maximum purchase price (including the maximum additional purchase price) at once, together with the parameters which may affect the amount of the additional purchase price, and disclose the final purchase price in future reporting. A listed company cannot evade the disclosure obligation by making an agreement with the opposite party stating that the purchase price or other required information will not be disclosed.

Different kinds of transactions can be considered price sensitive and there can be different ways to evaluate the transactions. Relevant information for the assessment could include the effects on the income statement or balance sheet resulting from the integration of operations or, alternatively, the effects of the sale. Under normal circumstances, the Exchange considers a transaction to be price sensitive where any of the following pertain:

• the target entity represents more than ten per cent of the listed company’s consolidated revenue or assets;

• the target entity represents more than ten per cent of the listed company’s consolidated equity capital according to the balance sheet; or

• the consideration paid for the target entity represents more than ten per cent of the listed company’s consolidated equity according to the balance sheet or more than ten per cent of the total market value of the listed company’s shares if its total equity capital is lower than the market value of its securities.

Transactions which do not fulfil the abovementioned limits can also be considered price sensitive, e.g. due to their strategic importance.

In conjunction with the acquisition of business activities, where the acquired business unit is not an independent business unit, it may be particularly important to report information regarding the purchase price, the type of business that has been acquired, the assets and liabilities included in the acquisition, the number of employees transferred, etc.

Financial difficulties

In situations where the company encounters financial difficulties, such as a liquidity crisis or suspension of payments, there may be difficult questions regarding the obligation to disclose inside information. For example, the company may find itself in a situation where significant decisions are taken by other parties, e.g., lenders or major shareholders.

It is, however, still the company that is responsible for disclosing inside information. This is achieved by the company staying continuously informed of developments through contacts with representatives from lenders, major shareholders, etc. On the basis of information then received, appropriate disclosure measures may be taken.

Not infrequently, loan agreements contain different types of limits in relation to equity ratio, turnover, credit ratings or suchlike (so called “covenants”) and if these limits are exceeded, the lender may demand repayment or renegotiation of the loan. Exceeding such limits may constitute inside information.

Decisions taken by authorities

Even though it may be difficult for the listed company to control processes where decisions concerning the company are made by authorities or courts of law, it is still the company’s responsibility to provide information, having a significant effect on the price of financial instrument, regarding such decision(s) to the securities markets as soon as possible. The information must be sufficiently comprehensive and relevant from the market’s viewpoint to enable an assessment of the effect on the listed company and its operations, result or financial position and thus the extent of the information needed may vary.

If it is impossible for the listed company to provide an opinion on the consequences of the decisions made by authorities or courts of law, the listed company may initially make a disclosure regarding the decision. As soon as the listed company has made an assessment of the consequence of the decision, if any, the listed company should make a new disclosure regarding these consequences as soon as possible.

Information regarding subsidiaries and affiliated companies

Decisions, facts and circumstances pertaining to the group or to individual subsidiaries, and in some cases affiliated companies as well, may be inside information. Evaluation is naturally affected by the legal and operational structure of the group and by other circumstances.

A situation may occur in which an affiliated company discloses information independently with regard to its own operations regardless of whether the affiliated company itself has a similar duty of disclosure. In such cases the listed (parent) company is required to evaluate whether that information constitutes inside information.

When the subsidiary is a listed company, circumstances in the subsidiary may be inside information for the parent company’s financial instruments and must be disclosed by the parent company.

Deviation in financial result or financial position
In the event that the financial result or position of the company deviates in an unexpected and significant way from what could reasonably be expected based on financial information previously disclosed by the company, information on such deviation may constitute inside information.

When deciding whether a change in financial results or the financial position of the company significant enough to constitute inside information, the company should evaluate the deviation based on the last known actual financial performance, forecasts or forward-looking statements. In deciding whether to make a disclosure, the company should consider performance prospects and publicly known changes in financial conditions during the remainder of the review period. Matters affecting such prospects may include changes in the company’s operating environment and seasonal patterns in the company’s line(s) of business. Attention may also be given to any information the company has disclosed about the effect of external factors on the company, e.g. sensitivity is analysis regarding commodity prices or in relation to specific market developments. Market expectations, such as analyst estimates, are not decisive for such evaluation; instead, the information disclosed by the company itself and what can justifiably be concluded from such information is decisive.

Substantial changes to the operations of the company

If substantial changes are made to the listed company during a short period of time, or in its business activities in other respects, to such a degree that the listed company may be regarded as a new undertaking, information on such changes may constitute inside information. Where the listed company discloses such changes, the disclosure should include the consequences of the changes.

2.2. Disclosure procedures

2.2.1. Information under MAR, other legislation and these Rules of the Exchange shall be disclosed by the Issuer as soon as possible in such a manner that information is available in a non-discriminatory way enabling fast access and complete, correct and timely assessment of the information by the public unless otherwise stated in the legislation or these Rules of the Exchange.

2.2.2. The Issuer shall provide any information to major media as well as to the officially appointed mechanism (disclosure storage), the FIN-FSA and the Exchange.

2.2.3. Corrections to information previously disclosed by the Issuer need to be disclosed as soon as possible after the error has been noticed, unless the error is insignificant.

2.2.4. Significant changes to information previously disclosed by the Issuer shall be disclosed as soon as possible.

Disclosures shall contain information stating that the information is inside information as well as information on the time and date of disclosure, the company’s name and the name and title of person who has given the disclosure.

If an issuer learns that inside information of which disclosure has been delayed under MAR has leaked prior to a disclosure or if the confidentiality of the inside information can no longer be ensured, the Issuer shall... as soon as possible make a disclosure. If inside information is given to a third party, who does not owe a duty of confidentiality, the disclosure shall be made simultaneously.

In situations where a rumour explicitly relates to inside information the disclosure of which has been delayed, the inside information shall be disclosed as soon as possible when the rumour is sufficiently accurate to indicate that the confidentiality of that information is no longer ensured.

Inside information must be disclosed in an effective manner so that all market participants shall have access to the same information at the same time.

The information the Issuer discloses must reflect the company’s actual situation and may not be misleading or inaccurate in any manner. Disclosed information shall be correct, relevant and clear.

Information must be sufficiently comprehensive to enable assessment of the effect of the information disclosed on the Issuer, its financial result and financial position, or the price of its listed financial instruments. Further, also information omitted from a disclosure may cause the disclosure to be inaccurate or misleading.

The requirement to inform the market as soon as possible means that very little time may elapse between the time when a decision is taken or an event occurs, and the disclosure thereof. Normally, the disclosure should not take more time than necessary to compile and disseminate the information, but at the same time it is necessary that the information must be ready to be disclosed, to allow a sufficiently comprehensive disclosure. Even if draft disclosures normally are prepared prior to planned decision making, the rule does not require an announcement e.g. during an ongoing meeting of the board of directors or other decision making.

The most important information in a disclosure shall be clearly presented at the beginning of the disclosure. Each disclosure by the company shall have a heading indicating the substance of the disclosure as well as contact information and internet address. Information shall be available without charge and be easily and chronologically found on the webpage of the Issuer.

Whenever the Issuer discloses significant changes to previously disclosed information, the changes should also be disclosed using the same distribution channels as previously.

In case an Issuer delays the disclosure of the inside information, the company shall record the decision and how the delay requirements have been met and monitoring of those during the delay. The Issuer shall notify the Financial Supervisory Authority about the delayed disclosure when disclosing the inside information. Explanations for delay shall be notified if requested by the FIN-FSA.

2.3. Decisions regarding admission to trading

2.3.1. The Issuer shall disclose information when it applies to have its financial instruments admitted to trading at the exchange for the first time.

2.3.2. The Issuer shall disclose any decision to apply to remove its financial instruments from trading at the exchange. The Issuer shall also disclose the outcome of any such application.
The duty to comply with the disclosure requirements enters into force when the Issuer applies to have its financial instruments admitted to trading. The Issuer has no obligation to disclose unsolicited listings.

2.4. Disclosure considered necessary to provide fair and orderly trading

2.4.1. If the Exchange considers that circumstances exist that result in substantial uncertainty regarding the Issuer and that additional information is required in order for the Exchange to be able to provide fair and orderly trading, the Exchange can require the Issuer to disclose necessary information.

This rule applies whether or not certain information is considered inside information. By requiring an Issuer to disclose additional information the Exchange may be able to give, or avoid giving, the Issuer’s financial instrument observation status or to avoid suspending trading when circumstances exist that result in substantial uncertainty regarding the Issuer or the pricing of the admitted financial instrument.

2.5. Website

2.5.1. The Issuer shall have its own website on which information disclosed by the Issuer in accordance with this Rulebook shall be available for at least five (5) years from the date of disclosure. However, reports disclosed according to periodic disclosure requirements shall be available for a minimum of ten (10) years from the date of disclosure. The information shall be made available on the website as soon as possible after the information has been disclosed.

The publication of information on the Issuer’s website is important for transparency and easy access to information for investors and other stakeholders. However, the Issuer must always make sure, that information is disclosed before it is published on the Issuers website to avoid asymmetrical information in the market. Technical problems with uploading content to the Issuers website should never cause a delay in the disclosure.

2.6. Advance information to Surveillance at the Exchange

2.6.1. If the Issuer intends to disclose information that is assumed to be of extraordinary importance for the Issuer, the Issuer shall notify the Exchange prior to disclosure.

If the Issuer intends to disclose information that is assumed to be of extraordinary importance for the Issuer, it is important that Surveillance receives the information in advance in order to consider if any measures need be taken by the Exchange.

2.7. Delivery of the disclosed information

2.7.1. Information to be disclosed in accordance with Chapter 2 shall also be submitted to the Exchange for surveillance purposes simultaneously with the disclosure of information.
2.7.2. An electronic format determined by the Exchange shall be used when the Issuer delivers information to the Exchange in order to be kept available on the website of the Exchange. This applies to all information to be disclosed or made public under the Rulebook and information which has been made public in accordance with Union law. The information shall be delivered in accordance with disclosure procedure at the same time with the disclosure.

2.8. Liquidity enhancement

2.8.1. The Issuer shall disclose when it has entered into a new agreement on liquidity enhancement.

Agreements on liquidity enhancement should be understood as any agreements on Liquidity Provision as well as any other agreements on liquidity enhancement or liquidity support entered into between the Issuer and the third party that provides the enhancement or support.

Agreements on market making entered into between a market maker and the Exchange under MiFID II (Directive on Markets in Financial Instruments, EU 2014/65) is not in scope of this rule.

2.8.2. The Issuer shall disclose the main terms of its agreements on liquidity enhancement and any changes thereto.

2.8.3. The issuer shall disclose the termination of an agreement on liquidity enhancement.

3.2.4. On special grounds, the Exchange may decide not to require the disclosure of a particular piece of information listed in b) through e) of rule 3.2.3.

10. Rejection of a listing application and appeals

3.2.6. The Exchange may reject any application for the listing of a bond in order to protect investors. The Exchange must decide an application for the listing of a bond within six (6) months of receipt. If the Exchange requests additional information from the applicant during this period, said time limit will be calculated from the date the Exchange receives such additional information. If the Exchange fails to render a decision within the indicated time, the application will be considered rejected.
