Foreword

Nasdaq's European Markets Welcomed 112 Listings in Record First Half of 2021

In the first half of 2021 Nasdaq welcomed 112 listings, including 86 initial public offerings (IPOs) and 9 exchange transfers, raising a total of EUR 6 billion on its European Markets. The numbers for the same period during 2020 were 22 listings, including 16 IPOs and 4 exchange transfers, which raised a combined EUR 0,3 billion. The number of listings and capital raised through IPOs on Nasdaq's European Markets in the first half of 2021 were the highest on record. In addition to the listings and transfers, 5 companies entered the Nasdaq Main Markets as SPACs (Special Purpose Acquisition Company), demonstrating strong interest for the listings model approved for the Nordic markets earlier this spring.

The total 112 listings represent EUR 28 billion in market cap

Nasdaq's European Markets welcomed 5 SPACs

The five largest listings by proceeds raised are Stillfront Group (raised EUR 3,0 billion), Vimian (raised EUR 2,9 billion), Hemnet Group (raised EUR 1,8 billion), Cint Group (raised EUR 1,5 billion), and Desenio Group AB (raised EUR 1,4 billion). Through the first two quarters of 2021, Nasdaq welcomed companies from various sectors including Technology, Telecommunications and Healthcare.

2021 FIRST HALF NASDAQ'S EUROPEAN MARKETS LISTINGS HIGHLIGHTS

SPACs on Nasdaq Europe

Special Purpose Acquisition Companies (“SPACs”) have been a feature of US stock markets for a number of years. As of February 2021, it is now possible to list SPACs on Nasdaq’s European markets as well.

What is a SPAC?

A SPAC is a shell company set up by investors with the sole purpose of raising money through an IPO in order eventually to acquire another company (“Business Combination”). The ultimate aim is to bring the target company to the stock market through the Business Combination.

What are the main rules around SPAC listings on Nasdaq’s European markets?

Nasdaq has taken significant inspiration from its US market’s rules and practice when it comes to establishing rules for SPAC listings on its European markets. There are three main requirements for SPAC listings, which are different from regular company listings, and which have the principal aim of protecting investors buying SPACs’ financial instruments:

- Requirements for deposit of at least 90% of IPO proceeds in a blocked bank account pending Business Combination, as a way of ring-fencing the IPO proceeds for the SPAC’s stated intention;
- 3 year time limit for completion of Business Combination, which must reach 80% of value of blocked bank account, so there is a clear time- and value window that is known to investors in advance;
- Requirements for redemption process for shareholders prior to Business Combination (a cap of as low as 10% of share capital may be set), so investors have the possibility to back out of their investment if they do not support the SPAC’s proposed acquisition;

In addition, since SPACs are shell companies, Nasdaq has removed the standard listing requirements concerning financial and business history.

Lastly, SPACs can only list on Nasdaq’s Main Markets (i.e. the regulated markets) in Europe, meaning the highest listing standards apply including the requirement for the SPAC to produce a prospectus to be approved by the relevant Financial Supervisory Authority.

Does the target company get a “free pass” to the stock market through the Business Combination?

SPACs do not entail a free pass or easier access to the stock market for the target company. This is because the rules require that, once the SPAC has identified a Business Combination and before closing can take place, the target company in question must undergo a complete listing review. This requirement is in place to ensure that the target company meets the Nasdaq listing requirements just like any other company seeking to list.

SPACs do have the option, however, of seeking a listing for the Business Combination either on the Main Market or on First North Growth Market, Nasdaq’s multilateral trading facility. The First North listing requirements are not as demanding as those on the regulated market, reflecting the generally smaller, younger, companies that are listed there, and the listing review correspondingly typically takes less time than on the Main Market.

Whichever market a SPAC chooses for the listing of the Business Combination, the principle is clear: the target company will be subject to all the Nasdaq listing requirements in the same way as all other listed companies, and a full listing review will be conducted prior to closing.

What SPAC activity has there been on Nasdaq's European markets to date?

During the first few months after adoption of the SPAC rules, Nasdaq Stockholm has reviewed and listed four SPACs (ACQ Bure, Aligro Acquisition Company, Creaspac, and tbd30), and Nasdaq Helsinki has reviewed and listed one (Viralta Acquisition Company). It is anticipated that more SPAC listings will follow in the second half of the year.

SPACs are set up by sponsors, which have a central role in funding and running the SPAC in return for potential gains through holding of shares and warrants in the SPAC. Broadly speaking, the SPACs listed to date fall into two categories: institutional SPACs, having an established investment firm backing them as sponsor; and entrepreneurial SPACs, having a group of individual investors acting as sponsors. While a common trend is that the SPACs aim to make an acquisition that is several times larger in value than the original IPO proceeds generated from listing, the investment focus and particularly the terms (e.g. redemption rights), and financial instruments (shares or shares and warrants), offered to investors vary from case to case.

There has not yet been a Business Combination performed by any of the SPACs listed on Nasdaq's European markets but, given the ongoing activity by all the listed SPACs in seeking appropriate targets, it is likely only a matter of time until the first Business Combination takes place.

For more details on Nasdaq's European rules for SPACs, see the Nasdaq Nordic Main Market Rulebook and the SPAC Q&A.

Reverse takeovers and Nasdaq's rules: how these are handled in practice

Reverse takeovers have in recent times been an increasingly common feature of Nasdaq's European markets. Briefly, a reverse takeover involves a (usually relatively small) listed company acquiring a (generally larger) non-listed company and paying with its own shares. The result is that the non-listed company effectively acquires the listed company and, in so doing, the latter's stock market listing.

Nasdaq is vigilant when it comes to reverse takeovers since they entail a change of identity and business in an existing listed company and this in turn raise the question of whether the company in its new form meets the Nasdaq listing requirements. There can be no free rides or short cuts to a listing, and all listed companies must demonstrate that they meet the listing requirements. For this reason, reverse takeovers are in general viewed by Nasdaq as constituting a "substantial change" of the listed company's business activities and/or organization. This gives the exchange grounds to intervene to ensure that listing requirements for the "new" entity are still met and has several consequences:

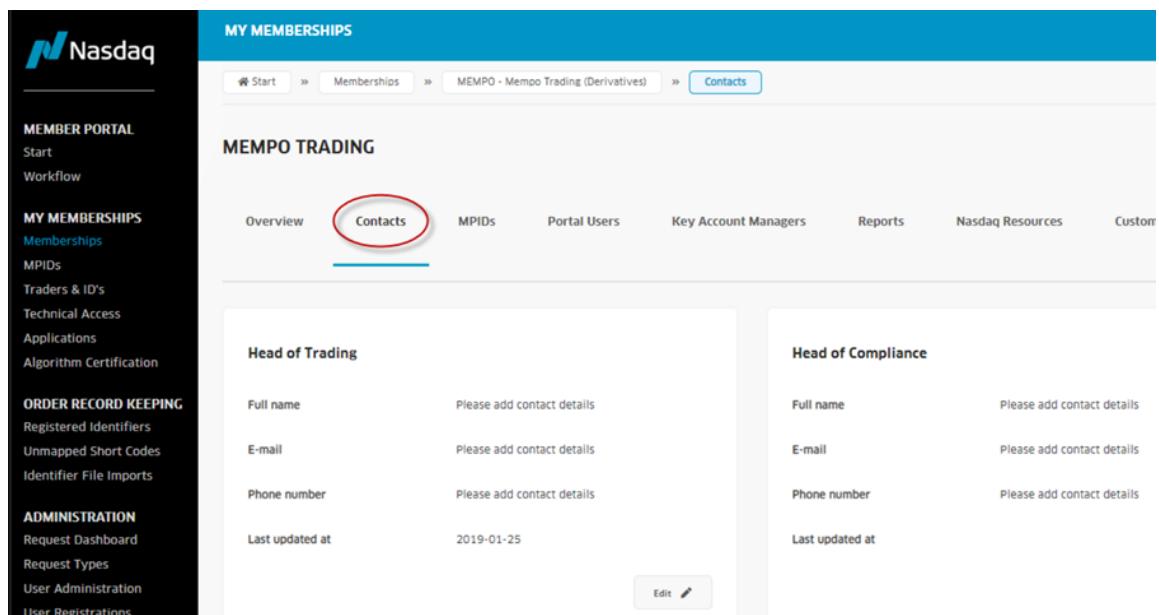

- the company's listed shares are moved to the observation segment (note that trading continues) as soon as the acquisition plans are made public so that investors are made aware of the changes taking place;
- the company in its proposed new form is subject to a full listing review, entailing the production of a prospectus or company description and satisfying the exchange that all listing requirements are met; and
- the reverse takeover should not be completed until the exchange has approved the company in its proposed new form through its listing review.

The company will be moved from the observation segment only once the listing review has been completed and Nasdaq has reached a decision on upholding the admission to trading of the company's shares as a result. In practice, many companies undergoing a reverse takeover wish to have Nasdaq's listing approval before holding a shareholder meeting to approve the reverse takeover, though this is up to the company itself to decide (and companies involved in reverse takeovers are encouraged by the exchange to contact Surveillance early in the process to agree on a reasonable and realistic timetable for the process)). In light of the above, reverse takeovers are in practice rarely a quicker or more straightforward route to listing than a classic IPO.

Information to exchange members

Nasdaq Nordic would like to remind all exchange members to ensure that the contact details in Member Portal are valid and up to date. Ensuring that the contact details are valid and up to date is a rulebook requirement and should therefore be valid at all times. Nasdaq Nordic would especially like to highlight the importance of being compliant with the requirement as the annual member surveillance questionnaire will be sent out in August 2021 and will be addressed to Head of Compliance and the registered member administrator. Please see the below picture from Member Portal on how you can amend the information.

Please reach out to membersurveillance@nasdaq.com if you have any questions relating to updating the contact details or other questions related to the upcoming annual member surveillance questionnaire.

Regulatory disclosures

Stockholm only: Implement the new instruction for provision of regulatory disclosures – intended for Nasdaq

Nasdaq Stockholm has provided a new instruction for provision of regulatory disclosures. The new instruction applies to share issuers on Nasdaq Stockholm and Nasdaq First North Growth Market Sweden, as of October 1, 2021¹. For other issuers, the instruction provided by the exchange on February 19, 2020, will still be applicable².

According to the currently applicable instruction, all issuers shall ensure that disclosures done in accordance with the applicable Nasdaq rulebook and Article 17 of MAR³ are simultaneously submitted to the exchange's surveillance department. This is most easily handled through the issuers' news distributor by including the email address provided in the instruction (PressReleaseSTO@nasdaq.com) in the distribution list for such regulatory disclosures.

According to the new instruction, share issuers on Nasdaq Stockholm and Nasdaq First North Growth Market Sweden shall ensure that the news distributors they use for disclosures of regulatory press releases are connected to the exchange's system for company news, "Company News System", and that any such regulatory disclosures thereby are made available immediately on the exchange's website for Company News: <http://www.nasdaqomxnordic.com/news/company-news>.

Share issuers covered by the new instruction shall as of October 1, 2021 no longer provide their regulatory press releases to PressReleaseSTO@nasdaq.com.

Only use regulatory channels for regulatory disclosures

Regulatory channels are meant for regulatory disclosures, i.e. disclosures that the issuer is obliged to make due to legal requirements or under the applicable Nasdaq rulebook. Only regulatory press releases shall be visible on the exchange's website for Company News.

Non-regulatory disclosures must not be published through regulatory channels. Such disclosures may instead be published on the exchange's website for Investor News:

<http://www.nasdaqomxnordic.com/news/investor-news>

Disclosures of inside information shall not be combined with marketing of the issuers activities
It is important to keep regulatory disclosures separated from marketing or other kinds of non-regulatory information. According to MAR article 17 an issuer shall not combine disclosure of inside information with marketing of the issuers activities.

Disciplinary Cases

Nasdaq Stockholm: DISCIPLINARY CASE 2021:01 – ATARI INC.

The Disciplinary Committee found that Atari Inc. (“Atari”) had breached the Nasdaq First North Growth Market Rulebook (the “Rulebook”) and therefore ordered the company to pay a fine corresponding to eight times the annual fee.

The Disciplinary Committee found that Atari, despite having been granted an exemption from the normal reporting deadline set out in the Rulebook, still had not disclosed its half-yearly financial report for the period April 1 – September 30, 2019 within the new agreed deadline. It was further concluded that Atari had not disclosed its annual financial statement for the financial year 2019/2020 within the reporting deadline, extended to four months due to the COVID-19 pandemic, nor its annual report within six months from the end of the financial year. In addition, Atari had not disclosed its half-yearly financial report for the period April 1 – September 30, 2020 within two months from the end of the reporting period.

The Disciplinary Committee further concluded that the exchange, in October 2019, had already criticized Atari for three different breaches of the disclosure rules in the Rulebook and that the exchange, in the event of any further deficiencies in the Atari’s compliance, had reserved its right to reconsider its decision not to refer that matter to the Disciplinary Committee.

In summary, the Disciplinary Committee concluded that Atari had breached the disclosure rules set out in the Rulebook on seven occasions. The Disciplinary Committee took a particularly serious view of Atari’s repeated breaches within a relatively short period of time.

Nasdaq Stockholm: DISCIPLINARY CASE 2021:02 – MODERN TIMES GROUP MTG AB

The Disciplinary Committee found that Modern Times Group MTG AB (“MTG”) had breached the rules of Nasdaq Stockholm (the “Rulebook”) and therefore ordered the company to pay a fine corresponding to two annual fees.

The Disciplinary Committee found that MTG had breached item 3.1 of the Rulebook as inside information from MTG’s annual financial statement 2019 had been accessible on MTG’s website before the information had been disclosed through a press release in accordance with Article 17 of the EU Market Abuse Regulation and the associated implementing regulation.

The Disciplinary Committee noted that the approach that appeared to have been used to access the information on MTG’s website had been applied in several previous cases and that the exchange, to avoid information leakages, had repeatedly called on issuers to review systems and procedures for the publication of financial reports on their websites. Against this background, the Disciplinary Committee took a serious view of MTG’s violation.

Nasdaq Stockholm: DISCIPLINARY CASE 2021:03 – SWEDBANK AB

The Disciplinary Committee found that Swedbank AB (“Swedbank”) had breached the rules of Nasdaq Stockholm (the “Rulebook”) and therefore ordered the company to pay a fine corresponding to twelve annual fees.

The Disciplinary Committee concluded that that Swedbank had breached item 3.1 of the Rulebook by not having handled well-known shortcomings in Swedbank’s processes and routines on anti-money laundering as inside information in accordance with the EU Market Abuse Regulation.

The Disciplinary Committee further concluded that Swedbank had breached item 3.1 of the Rulebook by not having handled information relating to a television program by Sveriges Television's Uppdrag Granskning in February 2019, on suspected money laundering in Swedbank's Baltic operations, as inside information.

Taking into account the abovementioned breaches, and the findings in relation to Swedbank's systems and procedures for handling of inside information, the Disciplinary Committee concluded that Swedbank had not had adequate capacity for providing information to the market as required under the Rulebook.

The Disciplinary Committee took a serious view of Swedbank's violations, which had risked damaging the public's confidence in the exchange and the Swedish securities markets in general.

The Nasdaq Nordic Foundation grants 11 Million SEK to research projects for 2021

In June, the Nasdaq Nordic Foundation distributed the 2021 research grants. This year the Foundation had received 31 applications. Out of these 15 research projects were selected for grants – resulting in a total grant distribution of 11.090.339 SEK.

The selected 2021 research projects covered such a wide spectra of topics, incl:

- Principles for a regulation of the Swedish corporate bond markets;
- The role of financial markets and subsidies in emission reductions and green innovation;
- On Accountable Measurement of Corporate Sustainability; the need for a sustainability index;
- Identifying financial crime in central bank digital currency data;
- Improving financial literacy: An Investigation into how children learn abstract financial concepts.

Another reflection is that this year we had a relatively large portion of applications within the ESG space – which is logical given the strong focus on ESG (not only within financial services).

Nasdaq Nordic Foundation was founded in 2005 to support the financial markets through scientific research.

The Foundation's mission is to promote scientific research and other initiatives related to the financial markets in Finland, Denmark and Sweden, with the goal of increasing competence and competitiveness for the financial markets within these countries.
