WEEKLY OPTIONS ON SWEDISH SHARES
THE BENEFITS OF LEVERAGE WITHOUT OVERPAYING FOR TIME VALUE

With weekly options investors can better express their view on individual shares in the short term. The weekly options feature the same contract specification and characteristics as the standardized stock options, but with a shorter time to maturity and expiration every week.

If you have a short-term view on a specific share (will the share price go up, down or stay unchanged in the short term), you will be able to invest in weekly option based on your view. You can choose the best matching exercise price according to your prediction. This provides you with a reactive instrument where you will skip paying too much for the time value of the option because of its shorter time to expiration.

Weekly options (puts and calls) are available on the most traded Swedish shares. The expiration day of weekly options is the first, second, fourth and fifth Friday each month, with a term of up to four weeks.

FACTS

- Call and put options with delivery of underlying shares at expiration
- American-style, i.e. option may be exercised during the term of the contract
- 100 shares per contract (adjustments may occur)
- Expiration each Friday except third Friday of month. Expiration day must be a full trading day
